Language and Educational Trajectories in Mozambique ,2014 This study explores educator narratives language perspectives and educational practices in recently implemented bilingual programs in central Mozambique Home to approximately twenty two million inhabitants more than twenty languages coexist in this country However Portuguese remains the only official language a vestige of Mozambique s colonial past Drawing on postcolonial and poststructural frameworks I use thematic analysis to investigate language and educational trajectories of teachers constructions of language legitimacy from teacher perspectives and language practices in the classroom Using data including in depth interviews participant observation and archival documentation I examine how 13 teachers life experiences and constructions of self identity shape attitudes towards language use and policy and shape implementation of bilingual education in Mozambican schools This study shows that multilingual educators even those from different generations reproduced a similar repressive mentality towards local languages and their roles in education Local languages were seen from the teachers perspectives as appropriate and valuable within informal traditional networks while Portuguese was appropriate in formal networks associated with modernity and cultural capital Implications are that national policy alone cannot translate into meaningful changes in implementation at the local level as long as teachers beliefs prevent appropriate adoption of bilingual curriculum This study contributes to the broader multilevel qualitative analysis of postcolonial countries with multiple indigenous populations and diverse language environments The interdisciplinary nature of this study spanning the fields of applied linguistics and education contributes to broader understandings of how language culture and identities intersect with educational policies and practices to impact educational possibilities for diverse learners in linguistically and culturally complex global contexts

New Frontiers in Forensic Linguistics Monwabisi Ralarala, Russell Kaschula, Georgina Heydon, 2019-06-25 The field of forensic linguistics is a niche area that has not enjoyed much participation from the African continent. The theme of language and the law in this book is one that straddles two important aspects of the legal history of South Africa in particular and how it has impacted on the country's legal and education systems. The declaration by the United Nations of 2019 as The International Year of Indigenous Languages is opportune not only for the launch of this book but for what its research content tells us of the strides taken in ensuring access to justice for all citizens of the world in a language they understand. The contributions by authors in this book tell the story of many African citizens and those hailing from beyond our borders who straddle the challenges of linguistic and legal pluralism in courtrooms across their respective countries. It is our hope that the contributions made in this book will assist in ensuring human rights become a reality for global citizens where indigenous voices have not been heard and that these citizens will be free to give their testimonies in a language of their choice and that they may be heard and understood

Diglossia and Language Contact Lotfi Sayahi, 2014-04-24 This volume provides a detailed analysis of language contact in North Africa and explores the historical presence of the languages used in the region, including the different varieties of Arabic and Berber as well as European languages. Using a wide range of data sets, it provides a comprehensive analysis of the mechanisms of language contact under classical diglossia and societal bilingualism, examining multiple cases of oral and written code switching. It also describes contact-induced lexical and structural change in such situations and discusses the possible appearance of new varieties within the context of diglossia. Examples from past diglossic situations are examined, including the situation in Muslim Spain and the Maltese Islands. An analysis of the current situation of Arabic vernaculars not only in the Maghreb but also in other Arabic-speaking areas is also presented. This book will appeal to anyone interested in language contact in the Arabic language and North Africa
